Fox Kids Europe has signed a deal with Gamegate . com to co-operate in the creation of online games for children aged 6-12 years old. Under the terms of the agreement, Gamegate . com will produce 15 original and exclusive online games over the next three years. It will also make available part of its existing library of over 100 games to be customised for FKE's web sites and used exclusively in the kids' market. The games will be single and multi-player games, covering a wide variety of categories, including action, sport and puzzle games.

Following an initial launch via the Internet, FKE intends to distribute the games via broadband and wireless networks.

FKE has just signed a five-year agreement with Kalisto Entertainment, a software developer and interactive content designer, to launch a game and interactive franchise for children and families.

ABSTRACT:

The Brazilian market of electronic games was estimated at US$250 mil in 1999 and is attracting foreign and domestic Web game sites. Currently 90% of the games are used off-line. The Argentinean sites GameMachine and Pablo Trench bets on the Brazilian users that already represent 50% of the access. Over the first week of operations Trench, that invested US$1.5 mil, registered 400,000 page views per day. Cyberjogos.com counts on 9,000 Brazilian users, 500,000 page views and made investments of US$1 mil together with the Argentinean bank Bisa. The Brazilian Atrativa made a partnership with the Dutch Gamegate . com and plans investments of R$5 mil in the first year of operations. Meanwhile, BananaGames operating for two months in the Internet, already conquered 15,000 users and 3 mil page views. The company invested R$2 mil is to make partnerships with foreign companies which can inject US$40mil.

Over $400 million in financing was secured by three Hungarian telecom firms last week money which executives said will be spent on expanding existing networks, attracting new business customers and, in the case of two, positioning the companies for a liberalized market at the end of next year.

In the largest of the deals, mobile phone operator Vodafone announced late last Friday that it raised $350 million ($313 million) in long-term financing from a consortium of banks led by ABN Amro Holding NV and Citibank to finance construction of its mobile phone network.

EMERYVILLE, Calif.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--March 9, 2000--At a time when finding talented, highly skilled professionals is the biggest job any business faces, and "time to market" is often measured in gold, the Ex'pression Center for New Media has just turned out its first class of graduates. After 14 months of intense "total immersion" education, 19 men and women are now reporting to great jobs with good pay.

"But don't go for the money," advised Eckart Wintzen, the Dutch investor who put up more than $20 million of his personal fortune to start the high-tech career training center. Wintzen addressed the graduates at a commencement ceremony at the school on Friday, March 3. "My advice would be, go for the fun! Go for your own passion! If you're good, you'll make the money anyway."

REDWOOD CITY, Calif., Jan. 14 /PRNewswire/ -- eXLearn.com announced today the addition of a major player to its list of Website content providers. The California based learning network that is targeted to launch the first of a number of Asian Internet portals beginning in Japan in March of 2000, has signed a licensing agreement with Gamegate . com to provide its customers with online Java games. Gamegate . com develops Trivia games, Netshows, and several single and multiplayer games.

eXLearn's Web portals will specialize in instruction of English as a second language, and technology and business training. "We want to make our portals fun as well as informative," says eXLearn.com president and CEO John Lincoln. "The great thing about Gamegate's Java games is that our customers won't have to download any plug-ins to play. They just click and play. The games are also a real asset in building community, which is what we're trying to accomplish."

Although we continue to have some concerns on the development of the Consumer Product and Internet businesses (see our 9 May 2000 report), we are of the opinion that FKE has made significant progress in the last twelve months. It has attracted senior management to build out its Consumer Product business. Additionally, it has made important announcements to enhance its Internet offering, including the development of online games with Gamegate . com , the launch of a virtual wallet in 2001, and the launch of entertainment services for kids on WAP.

Forecasts: ING Barings, High/Low: 1 year, Target Price: 1 year

Outlook of continued rapid growth. We believe that FKE to continue its strong growth. We estimate that FKE should nearly double its revenue and more than double EBITDA in the 2000A-2003F forecast period. We estimate a CAGR of 30% for revenue and a CAGR of 36% for EBITDA in 2000-2003F, following investments for building interactive playgrounds on Internet.

We have raised our estimates, in order to fine-tune and to include management indications at the FY00 results presentation that Internet development costs will come in at c.(Euro)10-15m in 2001F. We now estimate an equal amount for 2002F, where we had pencilled in (Euro)22m. We estimate revenues from the Internet to rapidly grow from $1m in FY01E to $4m in FY02F and $9m in FY03F. Our new FY01E-03F EPS estimates are -$0.11 (was -$0.27), $0.00 (was -$0.12), and $0.28 (was $0.20) respectively.
